MILK MEN DEAF TO BABIES' CRIES IN PROFIT HUNT

Checked by No Law, They Might Put Last Ounce Into By-Products.

SEEK FOREIGN MARKETS.

Only Drastic Regulation Can Stop Diversion of Fluid Supply From Consumer.

By Sophie Irene Loeb.
Thousands of New York children, according to the Health Department, are suffering from the want of more milk, which they cannot obtain on account of prohibitive prices. The searching inquiry made by The Evening World has disclosed a new and significant angle of the situation as follows:

There is no legal check on the milk production of this State, and this has led to a constant diversion of fluid milk from the daily consumer to condensing plants, confection factories, butter for foreign trade, etc.

In other words, milk produced in this State is not used for the purpose of providing fresh milk at a low price, but is used for highly profitable by-products.

For example, in the confectionery department of one of the largest milk companies the capital invested is $600,000 in plant and machinery, with a working capital of $400,000.

It is stated that 25,000 to 30,000 pounds of almond bars, chocolate cubes, caramels, etc., have produced a net profit for the last year of $490,000, exclusive of $524,000 war tax. Everything possible has been charged off, including $25,000 depreciation in factory.

BY-PRODUCTS CONSTANTLY EN-CROACH ON FLUID SUPPLY.

These by-products are more and more encroaching on the supply of fluid milk, and there is no regulation in existence by which the people can obtain the necessary supply of milk first and the by-products afterward in the supposed natural course. Every milk corporation has big by-product interests. A distinct fluid milk concern is rare.

That is to say, the milk manufacturers, if they find foreign markets for milk products as they are now finding for butter, could buy almost the entire production of milk in this State and use it for other purposes than fluid milk.

There is no stoppage, legal or otherwise. In fact, a prominent officer of the Dairymen's League told me that they were seriously considering diverting a large portion of the 60 per cent. of the milk production which is sold in fluid form to by-product concerns and let the New York people do whatever they liked about getting a sufficient supply of fluid milk.

More and more distributors of milk are going into the condensing business, since the profits are much greater.

Why is condensed milk? NO LEGAL CHECK ON DIVERSION OF SUPPLY.

Originally, condensed milk was made in order to take care only of the surplus milk after the consumer had been fully supplied with fluid milk.

To-day the conditions are being reversed. The condensed milk business and other by-products having proved so profitable, the fluid milk is being kept from the people purposely and high prices charged for it in order that the milk may be used for these profitable by-products.

There is no legal check in the industry anywhere; therefore, the condition exists now where the price of butter and cheese (the by-products) actually form the basis upon which milk is charged to the consumer.

In truth, the present new contract that has been made for the next six months between the Dairymen's League and one of the largest companies in made on a basis calculated on the butter and cheese market, and the contract, it is now presumed, will be the future basis upon which all the contracts for milk will be made.

In other words, instead of the milk being sold at a low price to the consumer and a great deal of it sold, and then the remainder made into butter and cheese, the reverse is true. Butter and cheese are figured upon before fluid milk; so that, unless something is done by which these by-products are counted together with the sale of fluid milk or in some way apportioned, the price of milk will be constantly high and the supply limited, especially as foreign markets are constantly being developed for these by-products.

GO TO BRING ROBBER YATES.

Going over prison records, Warden Brophy of Sing Sing discovered yesterday that Chester Yates, who escaped six years ago, owes the State a year and five months more than was first supposed.

Instead of one sentence, he has two to serve. He must serve the twenty years eight months balance of the sentence he was doing for robbing aged Aaron Hancock of $7,000 securities in the Produce Exchange. He owes the State a year and five months for violation of parole on a previous sentence he received in New York City for robbery.

Warden Brophy obtained a copy yesterday of the commitment papers for Yates's first sentence, with extradition papers. Prison guards will start to-day for Kansas City to bring back Yates.
